WOMEN AND MEN.

me Cardinal Points of Difference Be tween the Sexes. Women always show by their actions that ey enjoy going to church; men are less emonstrative. When a woman becomes surried she feels for a fan; when a man bedemonstrative. When a woman becomes furried she feels for a fan; when a man becomes furried he feels for a cigar. Women jump at conclusions and generally hit; men reason things out logically and generally miss the truth. Some women can't pass a millinery shop without looking in; some men can't pass a public house without going in. A woman never sees a baby without wanting to run away from it. Women love admiration, approbation, self-immolation on the part of others; are often weak, vain and frivolous. Ditto men. A woman always carries her purse in her and, so that other women will see it; a man carries his in his inside pocket, so that his wife won't see it. A woman can sit in a theater for three hours without getting all tramped up, catching the toothache, or becoming faint for want of fresh air; a man mit. A woman, from her sex and characte, has a claim to many things besides her thelter, food and clothing. She is not less a woman for being wedded; and the man who is fit to be trusted with a good wife recolscits alf which this implies, and shows himself at all times cityalrous, sweet-spoken, considerate and deferential.

NAPOLEON SMASHED THE VASE. He Had a Forcible Way of Arguing That

Was Entirely Convincing. Early in April, 1797, the people of Austria demanded peace with France. Negotiations were begun in the vicinity of Leoben. Bonaparte, in an interview with the Austrian plenipotentiaries, said to them, "Your government has sent against me four armies without generals, and this time a general without an army." In the treaty which the Austrian commissioners projected the first article stipulated that the emperor of Austria thereby recognized the French republic, "Erase it!" exclaimed Napoleon. "The existence of the repub-lic is as plain as the sun. This article is only fit for the blind. We see our own masters and shall establish any government we prefer. If one day the French people," he continued, "should wish to create a monarchy, the emperor might object that he had recognized a republic." The preliminaries were soon settled, Napoleon signing for France, thus placing himself on an equal footing with the emperor of Austria. The formal treaty known as Campo Formio was signed in October, 1797, Austria fulfilling the pledges she had already given. The Austrian plenipotentiary protested against the distribution of the provinces beyond the Adige. Napoleon vas angered at this, and seizing a vase dashed it to the ground, exclaiming, "If it is not so arranged, I will break your monarchy as I have broken this rase!" This argument of force, as demonstrated to the diplomat, was convincing, and the treaty was signed.-Exoperation was over. One day my curiosity got the better of me, and I begged for a sight of those mysterious documents guarded with so much care. "To please me my husband examined them. He found several unreceipted bills, some that had been paid and receipts filed; a note from a friend dated three months back, regretting that he didn't find him in his office when he called; one or two business cards of firms he had no recollection of knowing; several advertisement circulars; a playbill of last season's performance, preserved for some unforgotten tempo rary reason, and perhaps three really important papers among the whole lot. And I honestly believe if I had not prompted the investigation he would be uring those worthless bits of paper to this day under the impression that they were of value."—New York Tele-

A Satirical Picture In a Church. There is probably only one church in Britain which contains a satirical picture. It is the little church of South Brent, in Somersetshire. On three oaken pews are carved pictures which were intended to satirize the greed of a certain religious dignitary at Glastonbury. This ecclesiastic is represented in the first picture as a fox dressed in robes and miter and holding a crook in his right paw. In the second picture the fox has been manacled by a flock of geese, and in the third the birds have revenged themselves on their foe by hanging him from the branch of a tree. -London Correspondent.

The Bachelor's Fate.

A lonely old bachelor in Atchison sat on his porch the other evening, and in his great lonelinesss and desire to be made much of by one woman made up his mind that he would ask the seventh woman who passed, if unencumbered by a husband, to marry him. The first was a girl who wore red slippers and black stockings. The bachelor was critical and congratulated himself that he

The fourth had three children with her and talked about papa as she passed the gate. The fifth wore widow's weeds. The sixth was such a modest, pretty girl of 16 that the bachelor wondered if he hadn't said sixth instead of seventh. Several minutes elapsed before the seventh came into view.

She had a graceful walk, and a nearer view showed she was not bad looking. 'Might have done worse," he thought. She stopped as she reached the gate, turned and walked up the path. "By Jove, she is coming to take possession!" said the bachelor. 'I have come," said the woman in a voice that somehow made the bachelor's blood chill, "to ask your influence in favor of the constitutional amendment." The bachelor gave a horse yell, threw up his legs and fled. -Atchison Globe.

Added to all this is the fact, of paramount importance, that where much refrigeration is required the cost of a machine and its operation is far less than the cost of ice sufficient to do an equal amount of work.

These advantages have proved so great in practice that every brewery, packing house, cold storage warehouse or other establishment requiring a large amount of refrigeration contains its individualrefrigerating plant. Where consumption ounts to ten tons or more of ice daily the question of economy will be almost invariably decided in favor of the ma-chine. If less than ten tons be required, the cost of a machine and its operation may exceed the cost of ice sufficient to do a similar amount of work. In many cases the superior quality of the refrigeration obtained, its cleanliness, reliability and convenience or the requirement of more intense cold than ice will produce secures the adoption of the machine. Therefore small machines are frequently tound on shipboard, in hotels and apartment houses and in many manufactories, but most of the ice gathered from rivers and lakes or made in factories is not consumed by the few who require large quantities, but by the many, who severally require less than ten tons a day. The effort to bring this superior re frigeration within the reach of small consumers has taken two directionsthe production of small and inexpensive automatic machines and a system of supply of the refrigerant from central stations. The first has failed hitherto, because the balance of constantly vary ing pressures, temperatures, strength of solution, etc., is too complex a matter for purely automatic regulation. Without constant skilled attention the machines work unsatisfactorily, while the relatively high cost of plant, fuel and cooling water in operating on a small scale defeats economy.—Chicago Times.
